

Avehi's Publications: Empowerment through Media series

Dear Friends,

Avehi believes that media can facilitate the process of empowerment, by building confidence, self-awareness and helping to make visible the concerns of invisible and marginalised groups. With this in focus, Avehi has been involved in imparting training in a range of media skills and perspectives. The present manuals, which form a part of Avehi's Empowerment through Media series, are one of the outcomes of this process. We hope that they will be a useful addition to anyone who wishes to explore the possibility of using theatre and visual design for education, awareness and social action.

Training Manuals:

Rehearsing Change – An Introduction to Participatory Theatre by Prabir Bose

Through this manual, the author seeks to explain how participatory theatre as a rights-based process enables and empowers groups and communities through “cultural action” for social development. Participatory theatre is dialogic, interactive and participatory; it provides a platform to “rehearse” the action that would lead to change.

An Introduction To Making Visual Aids (Facilitator's guidelines for conducting 3-day training workshop) by Deepa Balsavar

The author describes the manual as a three day workshop that is meant to give basic information and set in place the thinking and knowledge of processes necessary to make individual visual aids. The focus of the workshop is on posters, flipcharts and flash cards though information on other kinds of visual material is also provided.
