Matters of concern

The criminalization of politics continues to be a major concern, with an increase in the overall number of MPs, as well as those representing Karnataka in the 15th Lok Sabha. All three major parties in Karnataka have MPs with criminal charges of serious nature.

The entry of big money into politics is another issue. In a nation where a large number of people still live below the poverty line, it is ironical that we have 300 crorepaths in the Lok Sabha. In Karnataka, the average assets of the elected MPs is 7 crores and 25 of them are crorepaths; the average assets of the losers is 1.8 crores. In the 2004 elections, the average assets of the elected Karnataka MPs was 1.21 crores. This is a disturbing trend because it indicates that ordinary citizens have almost no chance of entering politics. Only the major parties win, and they give tickets to people with large assets.

As media reports seem to indicate, the misuse of monetary incentives to buy votes has increased sharply since 2008 and continues to be a source of threat to real democracy. While voter awareness on this issue is very high, the problem is that those who win after spending huge amounts are unlikely to focus on good governance. They are more likely to focus on recovering the funds they spent and on giving favours to those who supported their campaigns.
